CAUGHT AND IDENTIFIED.

Every effort possible to capture the three robbers, who shot down Sail Aulgur, an officer of the law, has been made, both by the police authorities and detectives of the C. & A. Railroad. The account of this boldly-planned robbery, which ended in murder, was told in last week's REPUBLICAN.

The first arrest made was at Glasgow by Marshal Morgan of that city, which came about in the following way: Early Friday morning, three men were seen at West Glasgow, who secured ferriage across the river, stating at the time that they had been bumming through on the C. & A., and had been put off on the Gilliam hill. As they were traveling eastward, it is rather strange that they should have been put off while going down-grade.

The men after crossing the Missouri, kept well to the brush during most of the day, but that evening one of them, who had no hat, ventured into town to buy one. This the marshal heard of, and knowing also of the murder committed here and the attending circumstances, in that one had lost his hat, promptly arrested the suspect, who gave his name as William Lambert.

The sheriff here was notified and Deputy Fristoe sent after him, returning Saturday afternoon. The man he brought back weighs about 170 pounds and is a rough-looking individual, whom it would not be hard to suspect of any crime. The lost hat, a 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ , but well padded, fits quite well upon his head, and the contradictory stories the prisoner has already told, make a bad case against him.

H. H. Mowry, the night operator who was held up, was taken before him and positively identified him as one of the three. He has a bad cut on one of his hands and was badly bruised up, leading many to the opinion, that it was he who jumped through the south-east window down to the ground. If so, he is not the man, who fired the shot which killed Sail C. Aulgur, the brave and nerry officer.

FIVE THOUSAND DEATHS

The general manager of the Associated Press has received the following dispatch from R. G. Lowe, manager of the Galveston News, relative to the loss of life and destruction suffered from the awful storm:

A summary of the conditions prevailing at Galveston is more than the human intellect can master.

Briefly stated, the damage to property is anywhere between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000.

The loss of life cannot be computed. No lists could be kept, and all is simple guess-work.

Those already thrown out to sea and buried on the ground wherever found, will reach the horrible total of at least 3,000 souls.

My estimate of the loss on the island of the City of Galveston and the immediate surrounding district is between 4000 and 5000 deaths. I do not make this statement in fright or excitement. The whole story will never be told, because it cannot be told.

The necessities of those living are total. Not a single individual escaped property loss. The property on the island is wrecked, fully one-half totally swept out of existence altogether. What our needs are can be computed by the world at large by the statement herewith submitted much better than I could possibly summarize them. The help must be immediate."
